What to include in your report:

1. A Cover Page

Include:

- your name
- the title
- the course
- the semester and year

2. The Report!

A report is made up of an introduction, body and conclusion. It is good practice to organise a report under headings.

For this report, you may like to use the headings:

- Introduction
- The effect of ___________ (disability) on communication
- The effect of ___________ (disability) on social interaction
- The effect of ___________ (disability) on learning
- Strategies for supporting learners with___________(disability)
- Conclusion
- Reference List

Some ideas on what to include:

1. Introduction
   - Introduce the area of disability you have chosen. Define the disability/impairment and outline its characteristics.
2. Body
   o Discuss the:
     ▪ Effect of ____________ (disability) on communication
     ▪ Effect on social interaction
     ▪ Effect on learning
   o Outline some strategies for supporting this type of learner

3. Conclusion
   o Summarise your findings – what have you concluded from your research? Tie everything together in your own words. Integrate the information you have included in the report so far.

4. Reference List
   o List all your sources of information as per your TAFE reference guide
   o Please use at least three different sources, which could include books, (reputable) websites, and publication / research articles from an organisation such as Aspect.
