  - A new drug—billed as the biggest breakthrough since statins—has been hailed as a new dawn in heart treatment. Cardiovascular disease continues to be the world's biggest killer, accounting for one in three deaths. Until now, cholesterol-lowering statins or blood-thinning drugs have been the only medicinal avenue available—even though half of all heart attacks occur in people who do not have high cholesterol and a quarter of people go on to suffer a second attack within five years, despite treatment.
